PRESS RELEASE

Brussels, the 8th of March 2024

International Women's Day 2024

In the past years, the European Council, the European Commission, and the European Parliament have taken significant steps to empower women in the workplace and to combat gender-based violence.

There is, however, still much work to be done, and it will be crucial for the Parliamentarians and the College of Commissioners who will earn the confidence of citizens after the upcoming European elections, to keep up the good work. From our side, that of the family of the professions of law, health, finance, and engineering, CEPLIS is deeply committed to do its own bit for advancing gender equality. Women are key for innovation, success, and growth in our sector, and, therefore, we shall keep striving to create supportive environments where they can thrive professionally and fully develop their talents.

On this International Women's Day, let us reaffirm our commitment towards building a future where all individuals, regardless of gender, have equal opportunities to pursue their aspirations and contribute to society. Together, we can create a world where equality between women and men won't be a subject of debate anymore.
